Bob, you're in jury duty next week, right? I want to let the vendors know that we'll be scheduling interviews the week of the 15th (RFP says week of the 8th)

The RFP did outline the key questions that are important to the BID (see section VII [pages 15-18] of the attached document).

Why don't I go through each proposal and extract into executive summaries for your review. I can try to have this by end of day.

For now, let's put a hold on an in-person meeting.

Thanks

Ellen

PS. Happy anniversary to you and your wife, Del! Congrats

Hi Ellen,

Unfortunately, I cannot make that time (1 year anniversary and we are going away for the weekend). I honestly only made it through 3 proposals since Wednesday, and even then my recall was blurred between the 3.

Couple thoughts:

Instead of us reading through all the fluff of the 7-8 RFPs why not develop the key questions important to the BID and distribute that document back to the companies to provide funneled response (annual cost / estimated headcount hours / etc.) From there we can then line them up in a rubric/matrix for comparison.

Thank you,

Del Morais
